

Relationships with classmates.

Relationships in school are very similar to relationships with work colleagues, but only much harder, since we are talking about children. And as you know, kids can be very cruel and beskompromissnyj. And not because they are evil, but because they do not know how to lie. And the truth is often perceived as an professional resume services insult, not as a guide to action.

Very often classmates choose a victim for bullying. And, as a rule, by external qualities, because they are most clearly apparent. And not to become an outcast, it is very hard.

The class always clearly distributed the roles. These roles "gives" leader, who becomes the most daring and nimble child. It may not like the classmates, but I am afraid without exception. The leader decides who is in the class will be an outcast who the favorite was and who to run errands. But still, it should be noted that such a person in the class becomes a weak personality that asserts itself at the expense of others.

Favorites and "errand" are two extremes. As a leader, these people are very weak in spirit. Only their weakness manifests itself somewhat differently. They are afraid of loneliness, want to be first everywhere and in everything. But the lack of strength of spirit allows them to resist the already formed leader.

Rogue. This category among classmates at first glance it seems the weakest. But it turns out that such people have incredible fortitude. They are not afraid of being alone and completely freed from the whims of the leader. Is that to be a mockery to others. But it only reinforces their spirit.

There is another category. The so-called "herds". They are also the subject of ridicule by the leader and his retinue. That's just them not really bothering to write off gave.

There are in the class and the Pets that I admire all. These people also are aloof and not interfere in the Affairs of the class.
